

STUDENCKI FESTIWAL INFORMATYCZNY

Code of Conduct

Academic IT Festival (SFI) is an event gathering young people interested in IT, entrepreneurs and IT authorities. We aim to make SFI a part of the growth of the Polish IT community, especially in Cracow. We are willing to develop the potential of young people, inspire new and interesting initiatives and provide an opportunity to expand knowledge unusually.

General principles

We wish SFI to create a space for sharing ideas in a way that is entirely free of prejudice and discrimination. We are open to all people regardless of gender, sexual orientation, handicaps, disability, race, nation, age, appearance or personal beliefs, including political and religious ones.

All statements and materials presented should be consistent with the fundamental principles of social coexistence and the language culture. These apply equally to participants, speakers and all related to the organization of the Festival. If you notice a violation of this policy or have any doubts, questions or comments, please contact the organizers in person or via kontakt@sfi.pl. We will do our best to resolve any conflicts that may arise and we will provide the assistance needed.

Relationship with partners

The scale of the Festival and its success is largely determined by the support we receive from our partners. Relations with the Polish IT industry are extremely valuable to us, as well as the support provided by universities. We respect the contributions of the speakers whom we are pleased to host. It is impossible to list here all the associations, organizations, media or individuals with whom SFI cooperates.

These factors allow us, for several years now, to share our passion with a growing community of IT enthusiasts.

General principles are based on the Code of Conduct published by "Curry On Prague!". Thank you!
