Code of Conduct

SFI Academic IT Festival is a gathering event for young people interested in IT, entrepreneurs and well-known IT authorities. We would like SFI to be a part of the growth of the Polish IT community, especially in Cracow. We are willing to develop the potential of young people, inspire new and interesting initiatives and provide an opportunity to expand knowledge in a different way than usual.

General principles

The purpose of SFI is to create a space for sharing ideas in a way that is completely free of prejudice and discrimination. We are open to all people regardless of gender, sexual orientation, handicaps, disability, race, nation, age, appearance or personal beliefs, including political and religious ones.

All statements and materials presented should be consistent with the fundamental principles of social coexistence and the culture of statements. This applies equally to participants, speakers and all related to the organisation of the Festival.

If you notice a violation of this policy or have any doubts, questions or comments, please contact the organisers in person or via kontakt@sfi.pl. We will do our utmost to resolve any conflicts that may arise and we will provide the assistance needed. In case of inappropriate behaviour on the festival grounds, we reserve the right to take appropriate actions, including: warning, removing from the festival grounds or notifying the appropriate authorities.

Relationship with partners

The scale of the Festival and its success is largely determined by the support we receive from our partners. Relations with the Cracow IT industry are extremely valuable to us, as well as the support provided by universities. We respect the contributions of the speakers who we are pleased to host. It is impossible to list here all the associations, organisations, media or individuals with whom SFI cooperates.

These factors, gathered together for several years now, allow us to share our passion with a growing community of IT enthusiasts.

General principles are based on the Code of Conduct published by "Curry On Prague!". Thank you!
